Your experience with the exercises on Zeeguu

Please rate from 1-10 how much you agree with the following statements:

The Zeeguu exercises makes me more likely to study a foreign language often.

It's a funny and different way to learn something new.

It was rewarding learning new words in a foreign language, and the instant feedback in regard to which words needed more attention made me more likely to keep doing exercises.

The exercises provide an easy way to structure the learning process, making it easier to identify the problem areas of my learning. The fact that the exercises are quite simple also makes it less daunting to learn the language, which makes it more likely that I'll actually do the exercises.

Reading articles in a foreign language can seem borderline catastrophic for a noob like me, but the orderly and arranged articles ranked with length and difficulty breaks that barrier for me.

It's rewarding, easy to use and I like that the vocabulary is formed from articles - it makes it feel more authentic and usable

They were challenging yes, but I liked how it was connected to the articles from the beginning, so there was some familiarity. Also the "hint" function worked well if it became too challenging.

It's a fine way of learning. But the German machine pronunciation was very poor, so it was difficult to do/hear the right words in the exercises.

Uforpligtende, interessant og sjovt

Det træner jo specifikt i de ord som man finder svære. På svensk kan man få en masse kontekst ud af at man kender/genkender ord i en sætning, men man bliver mere velkendt i de afstikkere der er, fx navneord der afviger fra dansk

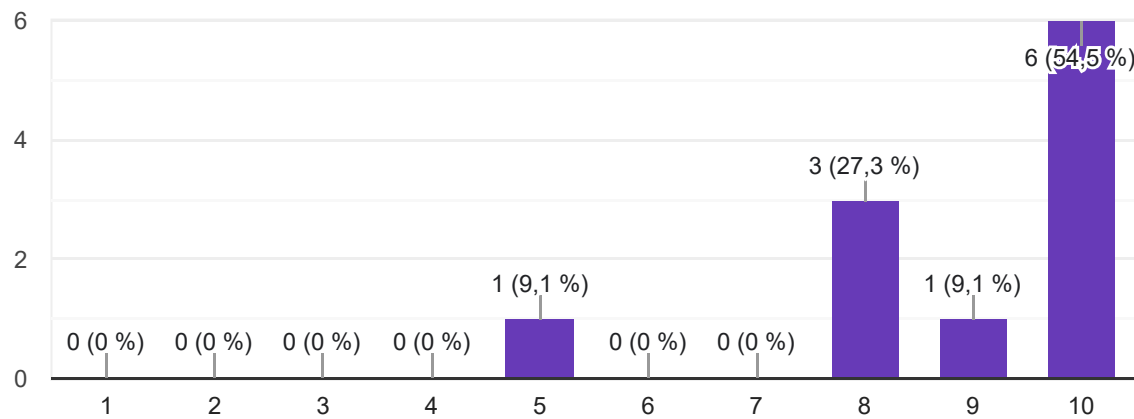

Good flow, great to read "real" articles and not just textbooks

I believe completing Zeeguu exercises regularly would make me learn more words in the language I'm studying.

I'm sure it will help me to learn new words.

The exercises are easy to understand and the repetition with difficult words would certainly help me in learning new words in the language I am studying.

I feel like the exercises helped, but at the same time, a lot of the exercises focused on the same words (maybe I should have read more articles before starting the exercises). I kind of felt like I knew a word pretty well, but the exercises would keep on using that word, instead of giving me a new word, which felt kind of frustrating towards the end.

Repeated tasks just work and stick.

I believe so because of the repetition and the context of the words from the articles. Also the combination of sound and text exercises is efficient

I already learned quite a lot from these few days, so yes I definitely think it would make learning easier. The concept works good. Also it just takes a few minutes to finish one exercise which means it doesn't feel like an incompressible amount of work to learn a few words.

Reading real life articles as the base combined with exercises seems good and interesting.

Hvis jeg tilføjede nye ord hver gang, så ville øvelserne klart lære mig flere ord. Men det gjorde jeg ikke i denne omgang, så jeg repeterede meget de samme ord i samme kontekst. Men jeg lærte selvfølgelig nogle nye ord.

Selvfølgelig lærer man flere ord når man aktivt øver sig på dem

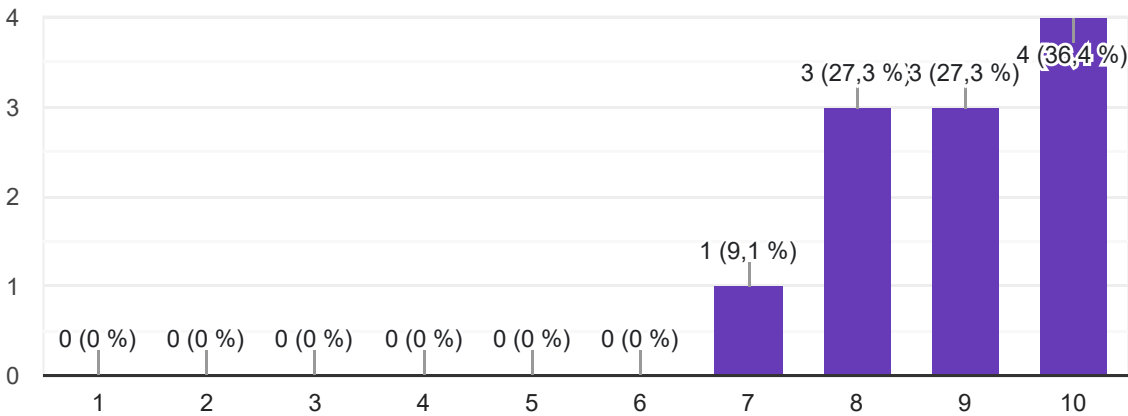

By exercising the exact word that I have trouble with it can expand my vocabulary

I believe completing Zeeguu exercises regularly would make me remember learned words more efficiently.

Becourse of the repitation, I Will learn more. Since I became older, I need repitations to remember.

That the exercises kept using some of the same words made them easier to remember, and using them in the context of an article I had read.

I believe this to be the case, as I got the same words over and over, and I remebered them as soon as I saw/heard them. Repetition is an effective device for remebering.

As I said before, it sticks when done repeatedly

Again because of the combination of hearing, spelling and recognizing the words I think that would be very efficient for learning the language over time

Yes because you keep exercising the words that you got wrong the first few times, so you only advance to new words if you have actually learned the ones you picked first.

Using and repeating words is a strong way of learning

Øvelse gør jo mester, så regelmæssig øvelse af de ord jeg havde svært ved at forstå, vil klart forbedre mit fransk. Rigtig fint at øvelserne er individuelle og tilpasset mit niveau. Men sjovt nok så kørte den meget på de samme øvelser og ord hele tiden. En del af de ord jeg markerede, fik jeg aldrig øvelser med.

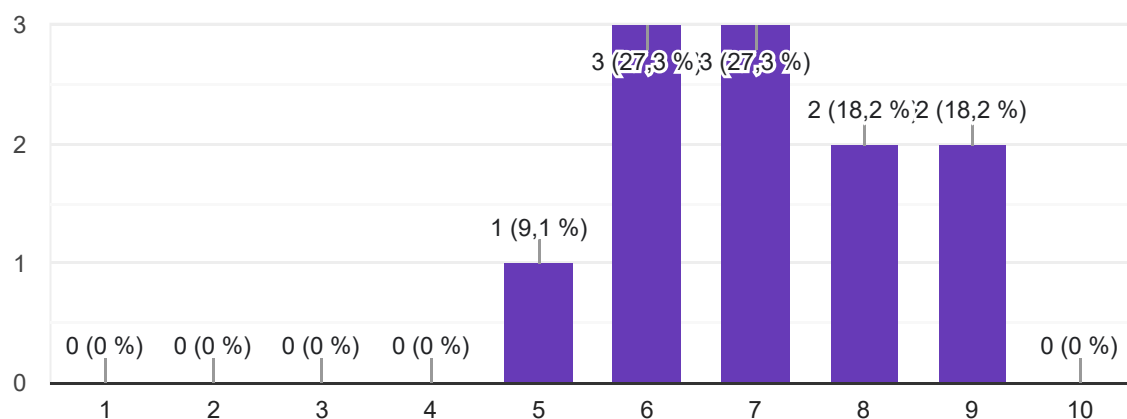

Læring er bedst gennem gentagelser og at øve sig. Hvis man gør det ofte vil ordnerne også blive hængende

By doing exercises with different focus - reading, spelling, writing, listening ect

Once I figured it out, I found it funny.

The type of exercises were good because they both used writing and sound, so you could improve the pronunciation of the words too. However the "hint" function did not help me much since it could only be used to give the first letter in a word, and I sometimes could have used more hints.

I found the exercises to be pretty easily understandable and engaging, but perhaps more variation could make them more fun, as fun wouldn't be the first word i would use to describe them.

Listening to german is always a bit fun, and even though I've only given a score of 6, that's still pretty impressive for this kind of stuff!

It's good that the exercises are varied and they change - they could perhaps vary even more

Well, fun is relative. But for a learning based exercise it was good, i liked how there was different kinds of exercises where you had to think about the word in different ways.

Machine language was poor.

Generelt set sjovt og lærerigt, men nogle af øvelserne drillede lidt. Fx når der var tre mulige svar at høre, så kunne jeg nogle gange kun høre dem én gang hver. Jeg ville gerne kunne høre dem flere gange. Og endnu mere ved de øvelser, hvor jeg skulle skrive det de sagde, der ville jeg gerne kunne høre dem flere gange, evt. gerne langsomt og så ville det være godt hvis den kunne vise, hvad der var forkert. Det der hint, som kun var begyndelsesbogstavet, kunne jeg ikke rigtig bruge til noget.

De var okay, nogle af dem gav ikke helt sig selv, men altså og ligefrem kalde det sjovt det ved jeg ikke. Arbejd lidt mere på noget grafik så der kommer noget belønning ud af at man gør det rigtigt

Great flow and various content

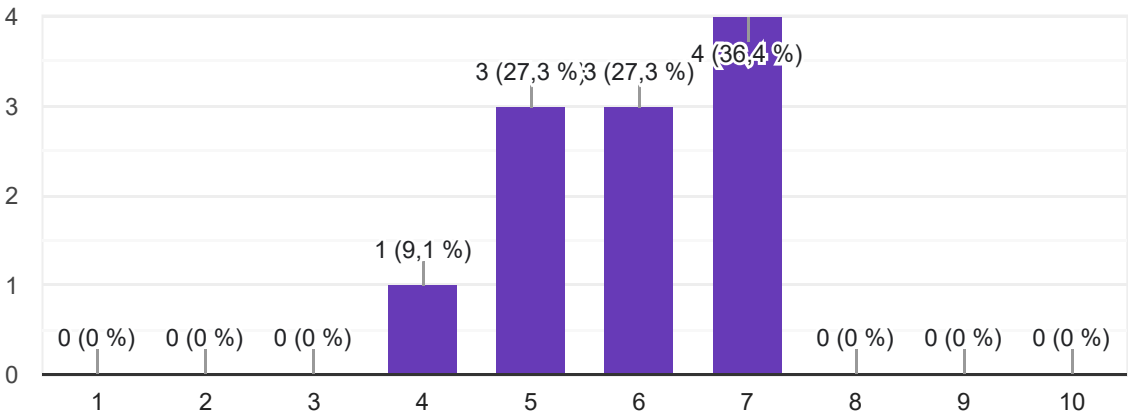

How difficult did you find the exercises?

Not hard, but hard enough...

They were pretty difficult because I am not great at Spanish, but I did not feel they were too difficult for my level, and I believe they have to be a little difficult if I am to learn from them.

I mainly had difficulty with the exercises that included spelling, as my spelling is far from flawless (especially in German). But other than that, the exercises were pretty straightforward and easy to do, which gave me a sense of progress that I enjoyed.

Some were a bit frustrating, like spelling a German word of 12-15 characters with only 1 hint, but others were a bit too easy like parsing only three translations.

I think they weren't too difficult, but just the right amount. But that's maybe due to the level I chose, and that suited me well, because I liked to be able to get some exercises right. And then know that I could just change the level if I wanted the exercises to be more challenging.

Well, I might have picked a language I was too unfamiliar with before I started, I think this might better suit someone that already knows at least a little bit of the language beforehand.

Fine level.

Nogle var teknisk udfordrende, fx fordi jeg kun kunne høre lyden en gang. Dem, hvor jeg skulle høre et ord og skrive det, var super svære, fordi fransk ikke helt skrives som det udtales. Nogle øvelser blev for nemme, fordi de var i nøjagtig samme kontekst, som i artiklen. Dermed lærte jeg at huske dem i konteksten, men jeg er ikke sikker på at jeg ville kunne bruge ordet selv i en ny sammenhæng.

Nogle af dem var virkelig svære at høre. Det kan have noget med stemmen som er computerprogrammeret som gjorde det knap så nemt for mig.

Since it was focusing on words I have troubles with, I demanded more focus.

The inclusion of audio-based exercises on Zeeguu makes me likely to study more often using the Zeeguu exercises

My problem was, that I had a hard time hearing, what she said. She spoke not clearly.

I thought it made it more interesting also learning the pronunciation of some of the words, and the different types of exercises generally made it more engaging.

Hearing a language is key to learning it, however the google-translate voice often made it quite difficult to hear the actual pronontiation of the word. I also feel that the varriation the audio-based exercises bring is imporant, as the exercies might get boring if they're all the same.

German just sounds "funny" and learning a new language is not just spelling and translating. It's very much also sound and dictation.

I think it helps to a broader learning of the specific language chosen, it feels like it's more easily applicable in real life when sound is included, because I imagine I would end up using the language to speak with locals on vacations for example

Audio based exercises were more fun, it was a nice change instead of only reading. Also it felt more like a game and made the exercise more fun.

The German pronunciation was poor.

For mig giver det slet ikke mening at lære sprog kun ved at kunne læse det, så det gør det meget mere interessant og relevant, at der er øvelser med lyd.

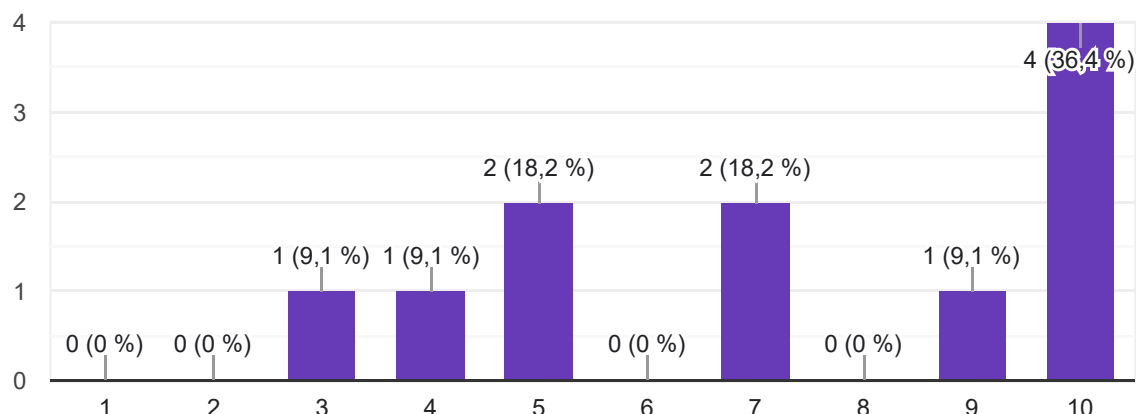

Jeg skal personligt se ting og ikke høre dem. Jeg synes ikke altid at øvelserne var lige nemme at høre, hvad katten det nu var man skulle sige.

It is fun and it support correct pronunciation

Only if it was easier to hear, what she said.

Hearing a word can also make it easier to remember it instead of just reading it.

Personally I've always been quite good at reading other languages and understanding the written word, so I don't think it would affect my learning that much. However the audio-based exercises forces you to think of and use the words in a different way, which I think is an important part of learning new languages.

Hearing AND seeing a word is much more effective than just one of the two.

It made it more fun, and also helped as to how certain words should be pronounced. I think the feature make one less likely to drop out and quite learning, because it makes it more fun, and also a little easier.

When the machine pronunciation gets better.

Jo mere interessant og relevant øvelserne er, jo mere sandsynligt er det, at jeg får dem lavet. Så derfor gør lydøvelserne klart at jeg vil gøre det mere, end hvis der ikke var lydøvelser.

Jeg tror bare at visuelle øvelser ville gøre mere for mig personligt

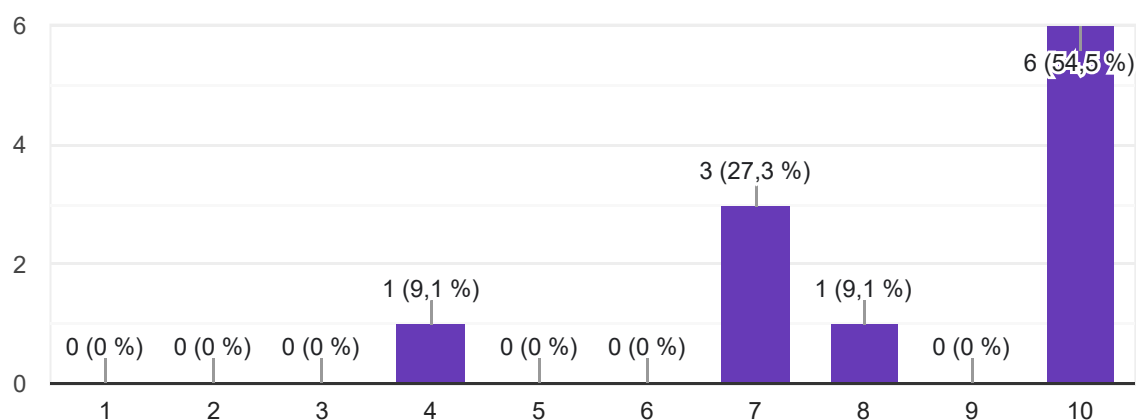

It is fun and it support correct pronunciation. I learn both the spelling and pronunciation, which is important when learning french

Doesn't made a difference, I think

Hearing a word can also make it easier to remember it instead of just reading it.

I ended up memorizing the bad google-translate pronontiations of the words, so Im sure that the audio helps with remembering.

Read the two above about sound and hearing.

I think the audio-based exercises help a lot to remember words and the pronunciation. For me the combination of audio and visual exercises is the best way to learn and remember

Audio stimuli definitely helps with learning, it is easier to remember a word if you hear, instead of only reading it.

Repeating is the way to remember.

Jeg lærer bedst ved både at se, røre og høre. Det får jeg stimuleret med alle lydøvelserne i Zeeguu.

Det er sprog, og derfor skal man helst høre det. Når man skal lære sprog er det vigtigste at blive talt til, for at kunne følge sprogytmer, og derfor er audio øvelser geniale, problemet er så hvis de ikke bliver indtalt af nogen der kan sprogets rytme, så kan man ikke få så meget gavn af den del

The change in type of exercises (from written to audio) made the experience much more engaging.

I think that the audio-based exercises helped through the variation that they brought. I might have preferred the written exercises, but I feel like the audio-exercises were a good supplement, as they made you think of the words in a slightly different way.

Just seems like a fuller experience.

I think it would have felt more flat to not have the audio exercises - like there would be missing a component in learning the language

Answers above.

Lydbaserede øvelser gjorde det helt klart både interessant og relevant.

Hmm, det ved jeg ikke om de gjorde

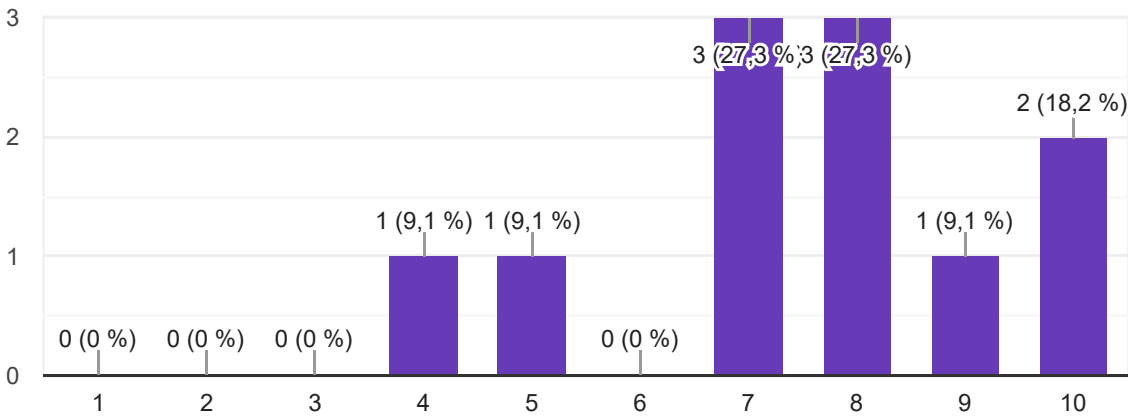

It forces me to uges more senses and fokus on the words in different ways

How difficult did you find this exercise compared to the existing text-based ones?

11 svar

A bit more difficult, since I had troubles hearing the Word.

It was difficult if I was unsure about the word, and the hint button could only give me the first letter, so it was difficult to solve it if it was a word with a difficult spelling.

This one was very difficult for me, as the pronontiation of the google-translate voice and the fact that most of the words were quite difficult to spell, really made me click the show solution button more than once.

Hard spelling a loooooong german word. Like G and CH often make the same sound?!

It was a little more difficult because sometimes the voice was difficult to hear, but that was better with head phones.

Well.. It definitely varied from word to word, alle exercises fluctuated in difficulty according to the specific word, and how hard it was, but if it was a particularly hard word, then the audio based exercise was also the hardest to solve. But also vice versa, the audio based exercise was the least difficult for the easiest words.

The machine pronunciation was hard to hear. The spell check should suggest the right word if almost correct instead of just telling it's wrong.

Den var ofte rigtig svær. Teknisk når jeg kun kunne høre ordet én gang og jeg havde svært ved at forstå det. Andre gange fordi fransk ofte staves meget anderledes end det skrives. Jeg ville gerne kunne høre ordet mange gange og også langsomt og tydeligt. Hintknappen gav mig kun forbogstavet og det var lidt træls, når jeg fx var i tvivl om anden halvdel af et ord. Så jeg endte desværre ret tit med 'Show solution'. Til gengæld følte det jo som en kæmpesejr, når jeg så kunne. Jeg ville ønske at checkknappen markerede det jeg havde skrevet, så jeg kunne se, hvad der var rigtigt og hvad der var forkert. Med farver eller overstregning eller lignende.

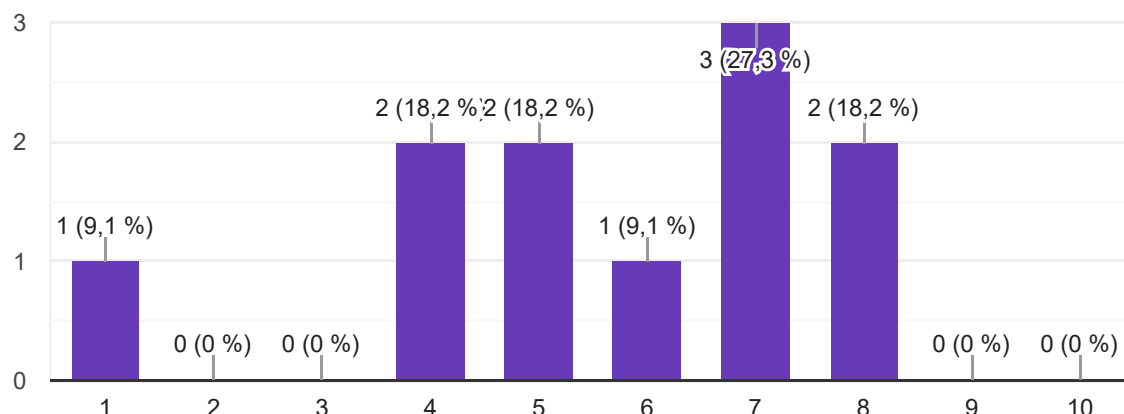

Det var fandme ikke nemt

Same as before.

I thought this exercise was a very intelligent way to incorporate auditive learning. And it was about the same difficulty level as the written ones.

As soon as I figured out what the voice was actually saying, I found this exercise rather easy.

This was better than spelling, and seemed more rewarding.

I think it was kind of the same - in this exercise I liked that I could use the method of exclusion

It was more difficult, but also the one that helped you learn the most(i might think) because you had to think more about the word and use it in context more.

Hard to hear the word.....

Den er lidt sværere, især fordi jeg oftest kun måtte høre ordene én gang. Men da jeg blev klar over det, så var det jo bare med at koncentrere sig og så gik det som regel fint.

Det gjorde det nemmere at bruge udelukkelsesmetoden, når der var lidt valgmuligheder, kontra den først der hurtigt kunne ende i noget gætværk

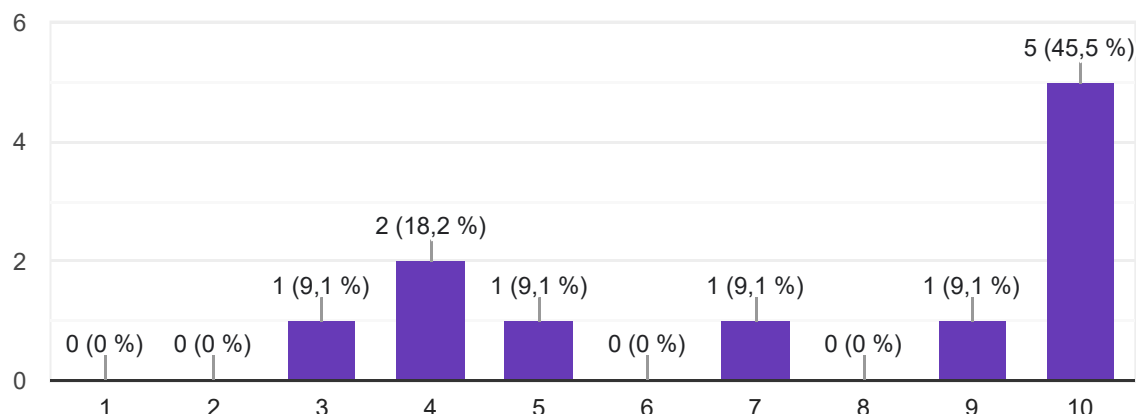

Spelling and pronunciation can be a lot different in french

Maybe. If she was more clear

It helps a lot to hear the word pronounced correctly.

In theory yes, but I really think the google-translate voice, kind of gives you the wrong idea about the pronontiation, at least on some of the words, but perhaps I just don't speak robot :/

Very much, especially if you've only experienced the language in film and TV

To hear the words is definitely a better way to practice pronunciation than to just read them

Definitely. Pronunciation of new languages doesn't just make sense to most people(me included), and words can be pronounced in ways that would surprise you, if you'd only read them.

Poor machine pronunciation

Det hører jo med til at lære et sprog at kunne forstå det talte sprog og også selv at kunne udtale det. Ved at kunne høre hvordan ordene udtales udvides mine sprogkunderskaber, men hvis det skal forbedre min udtale, så skal der også være øvelser, hvor jeg skal udtale ord.

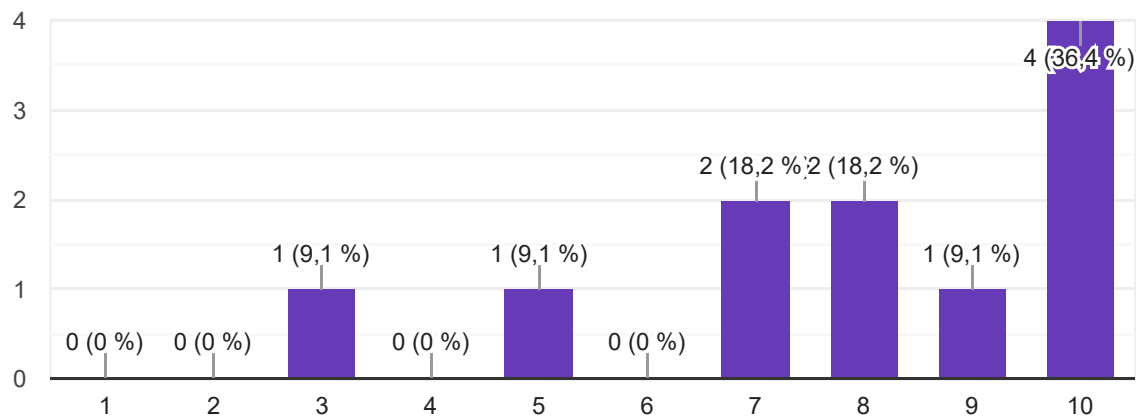

Det var for mig virkelig svært at høre

The audio-based exercises are helpful for improving my listening skills in the language I'm trying to learn

I think It would, if she wasn't so unclear

The more words you know the pronunciation of, the easier it becomes to understand the language when hearing it, even if you don't know every word in the sentence.

Again, I find the google-translate voice to be a problem, as I don't think many people speak german the way it does.

I think it would be almost impossible without.

I was learning French, and the written words in French are just very different from how they are pronounced, so with that language it was especially helpful

Yes, also because there was the feature to listen to it again if I didn't hear it properly the first time.

See previous

Lydøvelserne forbedrer min evne til at lytte til og forstå det talte sprog.

I og med det var så svært måtte man jo høre det en del gange udtalt

Please elaborate if you have further comments regarding your experience with the audio-based exercises

I think it adds a very important dimension to learning a language, and it helped vary the exercises further

No further comments, but i liked it.

Lyd er en super vigtig del af at lære sprog og jeg kunne sagtens forestille mig mange flere øvelser med fx hele sætninger og at jeg selv skulle udtale ord, som det vigtigste.

Your thoughts on improvements for the Zeeguu exercises

What would improve your learning outcome when completing Zeeguu exercises?

10 svar

Just the audio-part should be easier to hear

The hint function could be optimized, which I think would help the learning curve, especially in regard to longer and more difficult words.

A bit more variation in the words used in the exercises would be nice, as I used it more like a general way to learn the language, but I see that if what you want is to learn a couple of difficult words, then it works fine.

More and different kinds of scores than "these words were easy, these seemed hard" - that would motivate me.

I think the voices behind the audio-based exercises could be improved in the future, because sometimes they were a little difficult to hear. Also potentially including exercises where I would have to speak, could be an improvement for learning a language more in depth

Perhaps if you could go into a kind of "statistic" and see the words that you have already "unlocked".

Better machine pronunciation and suggestions to almost correct spelled words...

Lyd er en super vigtig del af at lære sprog og jeg kunne sagtens forestille mig mange flere øvelser med fx hele sætninger, der bliver læst op, og hvor jeg så skal vælge de rigtige ord blandt mange i den rigtige rækkefølge, og at jeg selv skulle udtale ord, som det vigtigste.

At blive mindet om at lave dem, en lille push notifikation eller lignende. Det var sjovt at skrive sig op til og læse lidt igennem men det blev også hurtigt glemt

More hints- would empower to give it another chance

What changes/improvements to the Zeeguu exercises would make you more motivated to learn?

9 svar

Maybe teksts, I can relate more to

I think an even greater variety in types of exercises. I sometimes found it kept using words in exercises I felt comfortable with the previous days, so maybe the exercises could use a greater number of words from the pool i chose while reading the article.

Perhaps if you were able to define what your purpose with using Zeeguu was at the offset, and the exercises would be made accordingly, as I find that there is a significant difference between wanting to memorize a few tricky words, and wanting to learn a language in general.

Small "rewards" during each exercise session.

I liked the way the vocabulary was built up and how you could see which words you needed to practice more, so maybe further use of this could motivate me

My answer from above, to help me see how "far" i have come.

See above

Jeg vil gerne kunne høre ord flere gange og gerne langsomt. Jeg vil gerne have mere hjælp til hvad der er rigtigt og hvad der er forkert i det jeg har skrevet. Jeg vil også gerne have de ord jeg øver i en ny kontekst, så jeg ikke kun lærer at huske dem i den specifikke artikels kontekst.

Belønning, om det er et trofæ efter 5 dages øvelser i streg eller det er en lille nisse der danser hvis man svarer rigtigt

What improvement would make the Zeeguu exercises more fun?

Perhaps it could be more fun if you could have questions based on more articles (I don't know if this is already possible). It would keep some of the exercise-types more fresh to see words in different sentences. Or perhaps it could have som standard phrases, so you could see the exercise-words in more situations.

Perhaps if it had some sort of points system it would motivate you to keep going and improve your score, making it more like a game.

Rewards, trophies and scoreboards with friends.

I think the exercises were pretty fun now. Perhaps some visuals - like video or photos

I don't really know tbh. Perhaps som happy sounds when you successfully finish an exercise.
